

Did you attend a Corinthian College or ITT Tech and now face student loan debt?

- Did you take out a federal loan to attend a Corinthian College (Heald, Everest or WyoTech) from 2010 to 2014?
- Did you take out a federal loan to attend ITT Tech and were either a student there when it closed on September 6, 2016 or you did not withdraw before May 6, 2016?
- Were your loans made through the William D. Ford Federal District Loan (Direct Loan) Program or the Federal Family Education Loan (FFEL) Program?
- Do you have an incomplete degree from a Corinthian College or ITT and have not yet paid back the federal loan?
- Did Corinthian or any other for-profit college mislead you by misrepresenting job placement rates for your program of study?
- If any of these applies to you, you may be entitled to a student loan debt discharge.

When corporate profits outweigh student welfare, it's time for change!

Corinthian Colleges, Inc. targeted thousands of low-income minority students promising them a job and a degree. When they closed all their campuses in 2015, they left these students without the promised degree but saddled with federal loans to repay.

Bay Area Coalition of Concerned Legal Professionals (CCLP) holds free legal advice sessions for low-income workers. CCLP filled a request from a student who took out federal loans for a Corinthian College education but never received a degree as the school shut down before he graduated. With the help of CCLP attorneys and advocates, he won his case and his loans were discharged. If you, or someone you know, needs help with a similar situation, contact us today.

To continue providing this assistance to students with debt from for-profit colleges that have closed, as well as other students and low-paid workers who lack access to legal recourse, CCLP urgently needs more volunteer advocates. Our office is open seven days a week and we're waiting to hear from you. If you have time to volunteer and want to learn to be an advocate.

IF NOT YOU, WHO? IF NOT NOW, WHEN?

Currently 94% of all students borrow money for college in hopes of earning higher income. AT the same time, 34% of all U.S. households are being pursued by a debt collector. College graduates of the class of 2016 left school with an average of $37,172 in student loan debt, up six percent from 2015, making them the most indebted class ever.

Student loan debt exceeds $1.45 trillion dollars nationally, more than credit card debt. As income inequality skyrockets in the lopsided “economic recovery,” we are faced with the same deadly scenario created by securitized mortgages and manipulation of the working class homebuyers that led to the 2008 financial collapse.

Coalition of Concerned Legal Professionals (CCLP) is an all-volunteer, private membership association. We are completely independent of government funding or any other funding with strings attached. CCLP brings together those who desire to make change in the legal arena a reality — not simply a word — and those denied legal recourse due to lack of sufficient wages to purchase the legal assistance they need.

CCLP enables its members, volunteers and benefit recipients to take on legal battles affecting thousands of low-income workers in the Bay Area and around the state. Through our systemic organizing methodology, CCLP allows you to play an instrumental part in solving day-to-day problems and fighting in the courts, halls of government and our communities to end policies that destroy the lives of not only poor and minority people, who lack the economic resources required for a legal battle, but also attorneys who want the chance to take on those fights! Contact CCLP today about your student loan debt or to volunteer.
